Mary and Tommy had been to hear a missionary talk at Sunday school. "Did he tell you about the poor heathen?" father inquired at the dinner table.

"Yes, sir," answered Mary. "He said that they were often hungry, and when they beat on their rumtums it could be heard for miles."

LLOYD-GEORGE MAKES CHEERFUL ANNOUNCEMENT IN BRITISH HOUSE

40,000 Workers Are Added in Three Months

London, July 28.—Sixteen national munitions factories have been established in England, and after consultation with the French ministry, the British government has decided to set up an additional ten large establishments. This announcement was made in the House of Commons this evening by the minister of munitions, David Lloyd George, who told of the progress made by his department in overcoming the shortage in shells that had prevented the army on the continent from doing all it might otherwise have done.

These new factories are being erected in the vicinity of the arsenals and the existing armament establishments, and, according to Mr. Lloyd George, when the government has completed in a few weeks the developments it is now engaged in, the supply of shells will be doubled.

"This," said the minister, "will not merely enable us to support our men, but will enable us to spare them by way through to victory."

SPEEDING UP CONTRACTS.

Mr. Lloyd George explained that until the factories are built the work of his department will be directed to speeding up existing contracts. One-third of the government had been faced with a grave labor shortage, and some machines were lying idle because no one could be found to work them. One-third of the machines engaged in government work at the outset were not being utilized at night.

During three months his department had succeeded in adding nearly 40,000 men and women—nearly half of the men skilled in the ranks of the workers connected with armaments, and they were pouring in further supplies. His department had also enrolled 100,000 volunteers, but it had been found difficult to remove the majority of skilled men who had enlisted. These, however, had been trained, and arrangements were made with the war office for the return of these men to the factories.

While the trade union leaders had agreed to the relaxation of trade union restrictions, he had not been

Temperance Workers Meet in Red Deer

The executive of the Alberta Temperance and Moral Reform League met in the Methodist school room on Thursday afternoon to discuss their future policy in meeting the changed conditions and carrying into effect the evident wishes of the people that the bars must be eliminated.

President T. H. Millar, of Edmonton, occupied the chair. Rev. M. F. Gold, of Edmonton, General Secretary, P. H. McDonald, Treasurer, and Rev. A. W. Coone, organizer and campaign director, submitted their reports for the recent successful prohibition campaign, which were adopted. Mr. McDonald's figures showed that the campaign had been conducted on less than half the estimated cost.

Plans for raising the deficit, amounting to about $5,000, were forwarded by a member of the finance committee and left for the sub-committee to deal with.

Votes of thanks were passed to the numerous temperance workers who aided the recent victory throughout the province, also to the officials of the A. & G.W. railways for their important services during the campaign.

Resolutions from the temperance organizations at Edmonton, Calgary, Medicine Hat and Lethbridge, dealing with the important questions facing the prohibition party today, were read by representatives at the meeting.

Resolutions were passed endorsing co-operation with the Dominion alliance in the fight for Dominion-wide prohibition and the further cultivation of temperance sentiment throughout the province.

A motion that a petition be forwarded to the Provincial Government requesting them to hand over the enforcement of the Liquor Act after July 1st, 1916, to an independent commission, who, together with all officers, vendors, etc., should be strong sympathizers with the Act.

The sub-committee was instructed to appoint committees to deal with the questions of amendment of the Election Act, a substitute for the bar, hotel accommodation and the prohibition of liquor advertisements on bill boards and newspapers.

Rev. A. W. Coone was re-elected as organizer and editor of the Searchlight.

Negotiations will be carried on with temperance forces in British Columbia, Saskatchewan and Manitoba toward establishing a good temperance weekly for the west.

Decisions as to time and date of the next convention of the league were left to the sub-committee.

THE NATION'S BUSINESS.

Hon. Mr. Loughheed, leader of the Senate, who is temporarily acting as Minister of Militia, is setting an example which is worth following by other members of the Cabinet and by leading public officials, says the Financial Post of July 24. On several occasions recently he has given out very important information of the work being done in his department, presenting it in a simple, straightforward style. Evidently Senator Loughheed recognizes that he is the servant of the people of Canada, and that they have a right to know what is being done with their money, and what the men they have employed to spend it and administer the departments are doing. Most of our Ministers and public servants are ultra-conservative in this respect and refuse to give the people of Canada, through the press, the information they are entitled to have. In the case of most Ministers, the neglect to supply the press with important information of the progress of the work of their department is due to preoccupation or oversight. Others, however, are very uncommunicative to the press and difficult of approach, and quite overlook the fact that the correspondents at Ottawa represent the people of Canada, not the owners of their individual papers. We trust that Mr. Loughheed will not fall into the habit of some of his colleagues.

SOME DAMNING "IFS" FOR GERMANY.

New York World, II, as Herr von Jagow says, "Germany has no guilt" in the offences recently committed at sea, how does it happen that its excuse for the Lusitania massacre is not based upon law or right but upon revenge and desperation? A man who killed women and children on such a plea would confess to murder. Is it different with a nation? If, as Herr von Jagow says, "Germany was driven by British naval activity to submarine war on trade," what is the precise use of the great navy which is now hidden in the Kiel canal? Is a civilized nation at war privileged to dealing honorable battle and resort to cowardly assassination? If, as Herr von Jagow says, "Germany is conducting a war in self defence for national existence," how does it happen that its armies are in Belgium, France and Russia, as they have been from the first days of the struggle? Why are they not behind German fortifications, like the doof II, as Herr von Jagow says, Great Britain is in a position by reason of its naval supremacy to give "the German people the choice of perishing from starvation or surrendering independence," what choice has Germany given to Belgium, which would have starved but for American charity and whose independence has disappeared in slaughter and devastation? Finally, if the United States were to accept Herr von Jagow's gracious permission on behalf of Germany, a nation having not a single first-class ship on the ocean, to trade under the

The Soul of a Soldier

(The "Daily News and Leader," London).

The writer of this sketch is a private in the Motor Transport Section of the A.S.C., who, before enlistment, was well known in business circles in the city.

Abide with me, fast falls the evening tide,
The darkness deepens, Lord, with me abide.

The last time I had heard these words was in an old church, set among trees that stretched up a mountain side, towering in majestic grandeur over one of Scotland's loveliest Highland lochs; this time it was "somewhere in France."

VALLEY OF THE SHADOW.

I had come back from the firing line through a veritable Valley of the Shadows, and in the fading light of that Sabbath evening my ears, worn with the thunder of battle, eagerly drank in the soft endowments of the old familiar hymn.

In the square of that little town, ravaged nine months ago by the Germans, great war wagons were ranged line upon line. Under a grove of chestnut trees a wayside motor repair workshop had been set out, the red glow of its forge told the tale of toil that knows no end, of days that have no settled length and weeks of days that have no name. But, their Sunday's task completed, the choir—as they call it—had assembled in a circle, under the trees, with a staff sergeant to lead their singing.

Worn and weary though I was with fifty hours of duty, I could not pass them by, but brought my car to rest. The major commanding the column, his officers by his side, stood just where I was on the fringe of the gathering in the darker shadows, but dimly seen, many of the townspeople were collected, scarce understanding, yet held in a spell by the soft sweetness of the music. From the "Yorkshire West" came some of the singers, as one might have guessed from the great white roses adorning each wagon; but it was the broad Scots accent of the little conductor, perhaps, which brought to me a memory of far-off days the distant land of my birth. In many countries I have wandered, in many strange scenes I have taken some part, but never before in alien land had home come back to me as there in that twilight hour.

For a moment or two the singing ceased; the hymn was ended. The roll of the guns but a mile or two away seemed strangely unreal; even they were silent. A few low, crooning notes, scarce a whisper, like the sighs of a high wind in the tree-tops, and there came to us who listened—

Lead, kindly Light,
Amid the encircling gloom.

Who in all this world, to whom these lines are familiar, could have remained unmoved by such a content only to listen at the previous hymn, but with the grey shadows deepening around us until all was indistinct—until the dread music of La Basse's light vibrating on the still night air—no mortal soul so dulled and dead, but stretched out its being to the Great God of battles.

Over that old square lined with high-pitched gables, its square old church tower a shadowy blot on the sky, against which the lurid light of battle stabbed the darkness, the plea for guidance rolled on and upwards to the very gates of heaven. No rank and file there, but one great appeal from the very human souls of that little wayside group; indeed, a song of prayer sprung from those who felt that amid the dangers so real, so near, only one power could lead them in the way of safety.

"Just Another, Staff!"

That too, ended, and to those who have lived for months within earshot of the guns, the muttering that came from beyond the darkness were as a silence of their own. Still, though the night were a little less dark, these soldiers were loath to break the solemn spell cast by the soul-stirring songs.

"Just another, Staff!" someone almost pleaded. The circle steadied; one or two stragglers joined again as, just for a moment, the guns were silent. Then, with a deafening crash, a nearby howitzer sent the very heavens with a shattering crash and lit the sky for an instant with blood red glances.

There was a silence of awe, then Onward Christian Soldiers, Marching as to war—

The little sergeant felt the call of the guns, and boldly led that song of battle. I wonder how many noted the words. They were, indeed, marching to war, these gallant souls taken from factory, workshop, office, and from the wide, rolling dales of sunny Yorkshire. That sound of terror so close, so compelling, had roused in every heart the dread call that has taken them far from home, from ease and safety, from friends and families—but these be the things for which they fight. And it is onward they are going. There is no doubt in their minds, no hesitation in their actions; no fear can be allotted to these brave lads who, in that remote corner of France, sang again their hymns of prayer and praise. To some perhaps their words had almost faded from memory, but from homes and Sunday schools, and great churches, too, the lines came echoing back over all the years.

"The King!"

By this time night has closed in, the great wagons were but vague

Submarine War Will Continue, Says Hollweg

NO POSSIBLE CHANCE OF ANY MODIFICATION OF THE GERMAN NAVAL PROGRAMME

Berlin, via London, July 29.—The imperial chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg has returned here from general headquarters, but nothing concerning results of his conference with the emperor can be ascertained at present beyond confirmation of the fact that the German answer to the American note, as previously stated, will not be delivered for some time, if, indeed, it is decided to prepare an answer.

Turn in Great Eastern Conflict

Russia Again on the Offensive

German Losses in the Past Four Days Total 35,000

London, July 29.—Telegraphing from Petrograd, the Morning Post's correspondent says:

"I might like the Russian position to that of a spider in his web. Whenever the enemy attacks, the decision is promptly taken on whether to let him continue to entangle himself further or to dispatch enough forces either to smash the attack or to compel the enemy to bring up more strength."

"The enemy is now shaking the Russian web over about two-thirds of its circumference while the spider sits watching his progress and waiting for the moment to take decisive action. That moment is still far off on all the fronts."

35,000 LOSS IN FOUR DAYS.

Petrograd, July 29.—Russian troops are on the offensive along the entire front in Poland. Before their violent counter-attacks the Germans trying to capture Warsaw have been compelled to retire from five to twelve miles at various points. Heavy losses have been inflicted on the Kaiser's forces. The casualties suffered by the Germans during the fighting of the last four days were officially estimated here today at 35,000.

Russia's finest troops are now on the battle front, and their presence is making itself felt in the check to the Germans. Hopes that Warsaw will be saved are increasing daily. The Germans are understood to have thrown into action on the front all their available forces, and the Russian military critics assert the enemy will be unable to bring up reinforcements.

FIERCEST BATTLE OF THE WAR

The conflict on the Narow front is the fiercest battle of the war. Without cessation either day or night, the combat is raging. Both Russians and Germans have their heaviest artillery in action. A dispatch to the Bourne Gazette from Warsaw states that more than 5,000 guns are being used along the circular front extending from Ostrolenka, on the Narow, to Skoln, on the Upper Bug.

SUCCESS IN THE BLACK SEA.

In the most successful raid on shadows, and at sunrise their drivers had to go about the business of supplying their brethren at the front with the necessities of life in the trenches. The last line died away echoing up the narrow streets. "The King," said the little Scotsman. Sharp to attention came the soldiers as the Britons' appeal for a beloved Sovereign rang out clear as a bugle call and ended that gathering roll of pathos and devotion.

Slowly and so wistfully the little band broke up; the Major had kindly worked for many who passed him on their way to rest. Turning to go, he said, "That was very nice, was it not?" Yes, sir, I answered, "Better than Tipperary!" And smiling he bade me God-speed.

A turn of the starting handle sent my great engine pulsing again into life and action. "Fired, but not a new spirit," I climbed back into the driving seat, and with a sweet silent presence that goes where I go, drifted slowly through the shadowed streets, for the red hand of war has taken away all lights.

A Lane of Sky.

The little houses grew still smaller as I reached the outskirts of the town, and blank darkness, with all its hidden dangers, lay in front of me, the tall trees stretching straight above left but a lane of sky to guide me on my way. For a brief moment a soft glow from the guttering candles of a wayside shrine picked out a kneeling figure, whose coat of blue and gold told me a comrade of France sought comfort there in prayer. And I, though there lay beneath my hand the strength of a hundred 'uns, felt as if again a child, I too, knelt in prayer at my mother's knee; and there echoed up from the silent town, from the deserted square, on to my lips:

Lead, kindly Light,
Amid the encircling gloom,
Lead Thou me on.

Trying to Get Bail for Reid

Socialists Employed to Secure Release of Man Charged With Sedition

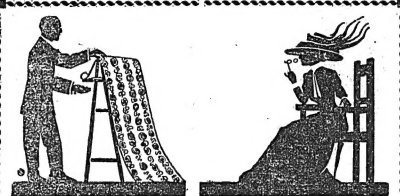

Calgary News-Telegram, July 30.—With the object of securing the release on bail of John Reid, Socialist candidate for the Dominion constituency of Red Deer, now detained on a charge of sedition here, Joseph Knight, organizer for the provincial executive committee of the Socialist party of Canada, reached Calgary, Thursday.

Mr. Knight will probably hold a meeting of the representative Socialists of the city and endeavor to procure the necessary funds and recognizances that will mean liberty for Reid, whose case it is understood, will not come up until fall.

Raze Constantinople

Rome, July 27.—The apostolic delegate at Constantinople has succeeded in conveying confidential information to the Vatican that the forcing of the Dardanelles is inevitable, and that the Turks are determined to massacre the Christians when the Allies occupy Constantinople which will probably be razed to the ground.

The delegate urged the Pope to use his influence to prevent massacres and to suggest that the Christians be interned in Asia Minor that they may escape death which otherwise will be inevitable. The Pope has appealed to Emperor Wilhelm and to Emperor Francis Joseph.

Harding-Eastwood

A very pretty wedding took place at the Peigan Reserve on July 3, in St. John's church, when Miss Harding, matron of the Victorian Home Indian school, and youngest daughter of Arthur Alfred Roberts Harding of Wellington College, Berkshire, England, was united in marriage with Corporal Holmes Eastwood, "C" Squadron, 12th Mounted Rifles, youngest son of Joseph Eastwood of Yorkville, England. The Rev. Mr. Haynes officiated at the ceremony.

The bride, who was given away by Mr. J. P. Owen, principal of the Victorian home, was prettily gowned in pale pink nonon-de-note, veiled with lace, and carried a bouquet of bride's roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Holliday, who was attired in blue crepe.

The church was prettily decorated with flowers and the walls draped with Union Jacks and bunting, while the Indian children and guests were dressed of red, white and blue ribbon.

The happy couple spent a few days in Lethbridge, the bride travelling in a cream service suit. Mrs. Eastwood will go to England when her husband leaves for the scene of action.

Russians Decide Upon Evacuation of Warsaw

DECISION COMES AS SURPRISE FOLLOWING THE SPLENDID RESISTANCE OF RUSSIAN TROOPS

London, July 29.—The evacuation of Warsaw, and the whole Polish salient by the Russians is indicated in despatches received from Petrograd today. The decision will come as a surprise to all outside the inner councils of the Russian general staff, as the splendid resistance which the Russians have been offering, apparently with considerable success, to the German efforts to encircle the city, were believed to be evidence of Grand Duke Nicholas' intention to fight it out with Germany.

It is pointed out, however, by the Russian military critics, after conversations with "Competent military authorities" that until the army is properly equipped to oppose the perfect Austro-German machine the sensible thing to do would be to avoid battle and withdraw until the artillery is organized and equipped and in a condition to take an aggressive offensive and drive the enemy from Russian soil. "Politics, rather than strategy, decided the Russians to advance into East Prussia and Galicia. It is explained by the critics, and while in doing so they centered great service to the western allies and inflicted terrible losses on both Austrians and Germans, they may now give up all and more than they gained."

It is anticipated by the Petrograd papers that the whole country, if evacuated will be denuded of resources which might prove valuable to the Germans, as has been done in most of the territory heretofore given up. The capture of Warsaw naturally would be made the occasion for great celebrations in Germany, and it is reported that Emperor William has arranged to make a state entry into the city, accompanied by the empress. The empress has been on a visit to Field Marshal Von Hindenburg's headquarters at Allenstein, East Prussia, and left there yesterday with the Crown Princess Cecilie for Nidenburg, which is across the Polish border.

In the meantime fighting of the greatest intensity continues around the Polish triangle, and as Berlin claims no important success, except the repulse of Russian attacks, it is presumed that the Russians are holding off the Austro-Germans.

Weird Tale Comes from Athens Now

Germany to Send An Army
Through the Balkans to Help Turkey

Athens, July 29.—Enver Pasha issued an extraordinary message to the troops on the Gallipoli peninsula before they marched to the attack: "Soldiers, you will fight with all your strength. At least, you will resist as long as possible, for I can promise you that within a month's time I shall be able to send you to your own homes. The life of Serbia cannot last now longer than a month. Within that time the German army will crush her and lay her at our feet."

A NEW MOVE.
 The correspondent is informed that great pressure has been brought up on the Germans by the Young Turks to fulfill their promise to send a German army through the Balkans to the assistance of the Turkish forces. The Young Turks regard the achievement of that plan as the only hope for old Turkish empire in Europe. A prominent military critic, who has completed a tour of the Balkans, and who has been in Austria, expresses to the correspondent the belief that such an army will be in the next few days the great move of the Austrians and Germans. Should this prove to be the case, it will have immediate and important results in this corner of Europe. It would be unwise to give details which are within knowledge, but so may be permitted to say that the counterbalancing events are moving rapidly, and that the enemy's plans may be possibly nipped in the bud by a surprise move.

Belgian Steamer and Swedish Brig Sunk

London, July 29.—5.50 p.m.—The Belgian steamer Princess Marie Jose, of 1,953 tons gross burden, was torpedoed and sunk today by a German submarine. Twenty-one members of the crew of 25 were saved.

The Princess Marie Jose was built at Hoboken, Belgium, in 1909. The vessel was 290 feet long, 41 feet beam and 18 feet deep.

BUILT IN 1873.
 London, July 29.—6.50 p.m.—The Swedish brig Fortune was torpedoed and sunk in the North Sea today by a German submarine, according to a dispatch from Copenhagen to the Exchange Telegraph Co. The crew was saved. The brig was 393 tons gross burden and was built in 1873.

Bulgaria is Warned by Russian Papers

Petrograd, via London, July 29.—Consideration by the Russian press of the reported agreement between Turkey and Bulgaria is universal. The Novo Vremya warns Bulgaria Russia is not likely to forget the former nation's indirect share in the defence of the Dardanelles. The Boura Gazette says the Allies would not object to the possession by Bulgaria of the territory down to the Euxine-Medea line if acquired by conquest, but emphatically objects to its being received as a gift from a foe.

The Czechs' (Bohemians) Aspirations

Racial warfare between Slav and German has been accepted as an obvious fact since the war between Russia and the two Kaisers began, but few Americans realize how deep this racial hatred goes and how Austria may, at any moment, be confronted by a revolt of her Slav subjects. Geographically, the most important of the Slav States belonging to the Austrian Empire, is the Kingdom of Bohemia, and its Czech (Bohemian) inhabitants are continually at loggerheads with their German neighbors. The reasons for this state of things are made clear by the London Morning Post, which says: "To explain this antagonism, it is necessary to go back to the period of the Reformation, which led to the Hussite wars. It was John Hus, the Rector of the University of Prague (1392-1415), who adopted the doctrine of John Wycliffe. For two centuries the Czech peasants repelled successfully many invasions of the German and Hungarian Papal armies, which ravaged Bohemia in the same way as their descendants have done in Belgium and Serbia. But the odds were too great. Half Europe was in arms against Bohemia, and the martyrdom of its population began with the defeat of the Bohemians in the Battle of the White Mountains (1620)."

Two-thirds of the population were either exterminated or driven abroad, and many emigrants settled in England, where they founded the Moravian Church. Those who remained at home, says The Post, elected the ancestors of the present Austrian Emperor to the throne of Bohemia. A mistake for which they had and still have to pay dearly, because the Hapsburgs broke the contracts made with the Czech nation. The Hapsburgs had only one thought, to destroy the glory of Bohemia, to stifle the culture of the Czechs, and to kill their language, in which Chaldean and other Bohemians preached to the world universal peace, equal rights for all men, and religious liberty."

Centuries of Germanization have not depredated the Czech of his individuality, and The Post continues: "This individuality of the Czechs is a characteristic of the peasantry of Bohemia, who, following old traditions, devised a distinctive style of arranging their homes and their costumes. They have their own poetry, music, dance, costumes, and ceremonies, all of which may be considered as the artistic side of Bohemian peasant culture. The Czechs look now with pride upon this traditional art of their peasants, seeing in it many links with the various branches of the Slavonic race. The great progress of Bohemia during the past century in art, education, and industry has gradually drawn the attention of Europe to the historic rights of the Czechs. The vitality of this race has served to make more apparent the inefficiency of the Austrians and to emphasize the fact that the Hapsburg Monarchy is not a modern institution, but a medieval survival. Austrian misrule can not continue in the face of the present high intellectual and economic development of the Czechs as opposed to the backward condition of the Teuton races."

The Post foresees the utter defeat of the two Kaisers and prophesies the creation of an independent Kingdom of Bohemia. "The hour of national emancipation has arrived," and Bohemians, Moravians, and Slovaks are looking forward to a new life. Bohemia will make her place among the free nations, and the old lands of the Bohemian Crown, namely, Bohemia, Moravia, and Silesia, will be united again."

In the new Europe which is about to be born the Czechs also desire their place in the sun. They desire to restore and to maintain their national individuality, and to remain Slavs as they always have been."

The foregoing article and picture appeared in the Literary Digest for July 3, 1915. While the historical data contain some inaccuracies, they are substantially correct, and along with the proclaimed attitude of the Bohemians (Czechs) and the joining of English, French, Russian and Serbian ranks on the part of many thousands of the Bohemians, unmistakably show that by words and deeds the Bohemians are on the side of the allies.

Port of London to be Placed in the World Lead

London, July 29.—Lord Devonport, chairman of the Port of London authorities, said to a party of newspaper men who were yesterday inspecting the new $11,000,000 dock just approaching completion:

"However much the war may interfere with general building construction work, nothing will be allowed to hinder to rushing to completion the great port improvements of London, which are now being carried out. It is our duty to see that the Port of London is so thoroughly equipped when the war is over that Hamburg can never again threaten our supremacy. The works which are now being constructed will make London in every way superior to every port in the world."

Friday night the feature will be "The Grouse Girl" with Marguerite Clark in the leading role.

KILL THE FLIES

Scientists will tell you that every house fly carries on it thousands upon thousands of germs, many of which are of dangerous and loathsome diseases. Keep down the fly, and you will very likely keep your house free from illness, with the consequent bills for doctors and medicine.

The female fly lays about 150 eggs at a time, and usually lays four clusters in a season. These eggs hatch out flies in from three to five days. You can easily estimate how many millions one female fly will produce during the summer.

The Girl Guides in Camp

The Red Deer Girl Guides are having the three of their lives at Sylvan Lake. They are camping in Mrs. G. W. Smith's cottage with the addition of three tents, and are under the care of Mrs. G. W. Smith and Mrs. E. W. Fuchs.

The chaperones also say they never had such a good time, as they enter into all the sports, even to riding and driving off the high diving board. The Guides are divided into four patrols, who take their turns at cooking; each patrol works every fourth day, and the meals they serve up are fit for a king.

Each day begins with devotional exercises, when any one going by would surely think an old time camp meeting was in progress. The rest of the day is for the sweet young things to enjoy as they please. The evenings are spent on the beach beside a huge bonfire, singing all the old sweet songs. And then the skies are rent with peals of laughter as the girls repeat to one another the bits of gossip which they have overheard from some of the other campers, who never were young themselves and not like any noise.

These are a few of the remarks they hear—"I think it is just shocking the way they are all around in their bloomers all day."

"I would not want a daughter of mine to be associated with a bunch like that."

Of course some remarks are complimentary, such as—

"If I could see the Girl Guide camp this morning, and thought how sensible the girls looked in their bloomers going down to the lake to wash their dishes, I would be better off in bloomers with the regulation costume for street wear, they are so appropriate, and much more picturesque than hobble or tight skirts."

Ask the Boy Scouts what they think of the Girl Guides.

Before the Boy Scouts left the lake they and the girls entertained each other at their bonfires, when there was keen competition in the way of yells and parody songs. These are a few of the girls gave the boys—

There is a Boy Scout Camp one mile away.
 Where they have onion tops three times a day.
 O how they shout and yell
 When they hear the dinner bell;
 O how their breath does smell—
 One mile away.

The Boy Scouts love us, this we know.
 For their actions tell us so.
 And we all enjoy their noise,
 Though we never saw such boys.
 O how they love us;
 Yes, they do love us;
 O how they love us;
 Their actions tell us so.

The girls accompanied the boys to the station last Saturday morning, and this was their parting salute: Good-bye, my Boy Scout, Farewell to you, I will be thinking of your eyes so true.
 Mid camp fires gleaming,
 Mid yell and shout,
 I will be dreaming of my own Boy Scout.

Austrians Take Lublin, Inhabitants Flee from Warsaw

London, July 31.—Austro-German cavalry have entered Lublin. Official announcement to this effect from Vienna, supplementing German dispatch of last night that the Russian grip along this southern front had been broken, indicates that the important Lublin-Chelm railway now is strongly held by the invaders, cutting off one line of retreat for the Russian forces in Southern Poland.

Meantime, Gen. von Buslow continued the drive toward Vilna, pushing out to the northern railway from Warsaw to Petrograd, and the predicament of the Russian armies seeking to withdraw intact from Warsaw, unless the main forces already are out of the district, becomes more perilous.

WARSAW'S 800,000 INHABITANTS FLEE.

WARSAW'S 800,000 inhabitants, laden with such household articles and supplies of food as they can carry, are fleeing the city toward the east, and every dispatch from Russia makes guarded reference, though quite colorless, to some phase of the evacuation of the city.
